HERE is at least one spot in the American Union which does not yield an undivided allegiance to the great national holiday. Its citizens may, and doubtless do, manifest as great enthusiasm and expend as much money for visual patriotism on that day of days as others, but in their swelling hearts there is a tender reservation. The immortal Declaration of 1776 is indeed dear to them, but there is a deeper, for they are the citizens of Charlotte, N. C., the scene of the adoption of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence. According to the historians—most of whom are particular to disavow all conventional knowledge of the matter—a convention made up of delegates from every company of militia in Mecklenburg county, N. C., met at Charlotte, the county town, on May 20, 1775, more than a year before the promulgation of the immortal document at Philadelphia, and adopted a declaration of independence.

The origin of this early declaration is enveloped in a good deal of obscurity. There has even been a spirited and prolonged controversy over the date of the convention. This fact has given rise in the minds of many persons to the impression that two conventions may have been held. The difficulty in fixing the date has also led to the conviction in the minds of others that the declaration is a patriotic myth. This skeptiof the crown, thus vacating all civil and military commissions granted by the crown.

Fifth.—That all military officers of the county are retained in their former commands and that every member of the convention be hereafter a civil officer with power to issue process, hear and determine all matters of controversy, preserve peace and harmony and endeavor to spread the love of country until a more generally organized government be maintained in the province.

Although the precise words of this much disputed document may never be known, and even though a formal declaration was never made, nothing can detract from the patriotic attitude assumed by the Old North State during the period antecedent to the breaking out of the Revolution and the part taken by her in that never to be forgotten struggle. For nearly 200 years before the severance of the ties which bound her to the mother country Carolina had been developing into a freedom loving and despot hating colony. At an early day an elaborate scheme of government had been formulated by the philosopher John Locke. It provided for three orders of nobility and four houses of parliament. It was altogether too comprehensive for the Carolina planters, and they declined to accept it. Not to quibble, the population was sturdy and self reliant and inclined to be critical of any system of government which interfered too markedly with its own ways and wishes. When they were given a governor who attempted to be more loyal to the mother country than to their interests these undaunted colonists were in the habit of sending him home. Many of the early settlers were Scotch-Irish and Germans from the Palatinate. After the battle of Culloden (1746) many Scotch families made homes for themselves on both sides of the Cape Fear river, and they were sturdy, independent folk with ideas of their own and strong wills to back them.

Many of the royal governors found it no easy task to keep these free spoken pioneers to their allegiance. Many of them came into direct conflict with the inhabitants. The first provincial congress of North Carolina met in defiance of Governor Josiah Martin in 1774 and sent delegates to the Continental congress. The state

THE Boston massacre of March 5 was to be commemorated by a public meeting in the Old South church. Joseph Warren was to be the orator, and the leading patriots, Adams, Hancock, Otis and the others, were to be present. The 5th of March fell on Sunday, and the meeting was to take place on Monday. The announcement of it thrilled Boston and the neighboring towns.

In the morning of the day people came pouring into the town on foot, on horseback and in all kinds of provincial vehicles. The Old South church filled at an early hour. The British authorities saw the rising tide of patriotic spirit and took alarm. A British officer met some other British officer on the common. He had a basket of eggs on his arm.

"There will be a great gathering of the minute men today," said he, "and we have the authority to arrest the leaders—Warren, Hancock and Adams. Let us do it in the Old South church so as to impress the people. We must arrest them all at the same time in order to prevent mob violence. We must show our authority so as to overawe the people. We must have a signal. What shall it be?"

Silence.
"Boy," said the officer to a lad who was passing, "your father is a loyal man?"

"Yes, sir."
"Do you know Warren?"
"Yes, sir."
"I want you to take this egg. It represents King George's empire in America—do you understand? Queen Charlotte's empire in America—do you understand? I want you to take it into the Old South church, and when Warren begins to move the feelings of the people, throw it at him."

He put the egg into the hands of the boy and said to the officer:

"That shall be our signal."

When Warren arrived at the Old South church in the black robes of the orator the yard and church were so crowded that he could not enter by the door. A ladder was set for him on the outside. The people were greatly surprised to see his form in his black oratorical robes rise before the great window.

He entered through the window, which may still be seen, and began his oration under the sounding board of the pulpit, which still remains.

His soul took fire. His words burned and glowed. He swayed the hearts of the people. A British officer held up before him some bullets in his hand, and Warren dropped over them his white handkerchief, an act which a schoolboy might have repeated while reciting Warren's great oration. The British officers awaited the signal. The boy was there trembling. In an outburst of eloquence the people pressed forward and almost crushed each other.

The trembling boy to whom was entrusted the fate of King George's empire and Queen Charlotte's empire felt a sudden coolness in his feverish hands. His fingers were dripping.

King George's empire was gone—Queen Charlotte's.

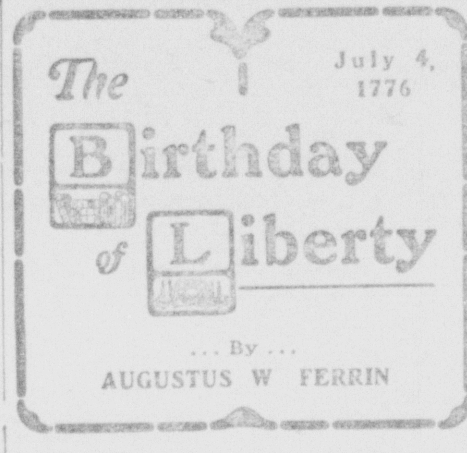

His face wrinkled and he disappeared, how and when we do not know.

What would have been the political history of the American nation had that egg been thrown?

Domestic Fireworks.

Walton—Are you going to have any fireworks on the Fourth?

Esneep—I wouldn't be surprised. We generally do at our house. On last Fourth my wife's temper exploded and she blew me up and fired the hired girl.

PLAIN brick building of antique aspect, yet one of the most notable buildings in America, if not in all the world, is the old statehouse in Philadelphia. Within its now ancient walls were written history's most glowing pages. The cradle of American independence, its unpretentious spire has pointed the way to freedom to two hemispheres, to republics undreamed of when its homely cornerstone was laid. Here was signed that declaration of the rights of man which marked the beginning of the greatest epoch in the world's development. From its tower the Liberty bell, tolling the knell of despotism, rang out the birth of a new government among the nations. Here George Washington was commissioned to lead his undisciplined troops to victory.

Here the Continental congress met and deliberated, "a company of demigods."

Here was framed the constitution on which the republic has rested as upon a rock for more than a hundred years. As long as the hand of man can stay the destructive forces of nature this temple of liberty will be preserved, a source of inspiration not only to those who claim it as their direct inheritance, but to the inhabitants of every land. From its altar vent forth the brand which lighted the torch of freedom for France, and it may yet be as deeply revered upon the banks of the Neva as upon the banks of the Seine.

moned 8,000 citizens to the statehouse square, who pledged themselves to the cause of liberty. July 4, 1776, it announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Andrew McNair was the man who rang it on that memorable day. On Sept. 23 of the same year the bell called the assembly of Pennsylvania to meet for the last time. On Sept. 3, 1783, it announced the proclamation of peace. From then until 1835 every event in the history of the United States was made known to the citizens of Philadelphia by the silvery notes of the Liberty bell. July 8, 1835, fifty-nine years after the proclamation of the "immortal declaration," it was rung for the last time during the funeral of Chief Justice Marshall. Suddenly and without any apparent reason it cracked while tolling the passing of the great jurist. That crack is one of its proudest markings. The last man to ring the old bell was Thomas Downing.

The Liberty bell has many times left its home. First when Philadelphia was taken by the British and the statehouse was used as a hospital and morgue for English soldiers. Then the bell was carried to Allentown, Pa., guarded by North Carolina and Virginia troops. It was returned to Philadelphia in 1778. Its later journeys have been more auspicious. In 1835 it was taken, under a guard of honor, to New Orleans for the world's industrial and cotton exposition, greeted everywhere along its route by cheering thousands. In 1893 it went to Chicago. In 1895 to Atlanta, in 1902 to Charleston and last year to St. Louis. It now rests in a sacred room in Independence hall, and though its presence at the Jamestown exposition has been requested, it is likely never to be disturbed again.

The old statehouse is now used as a historical museum and is full of relics of Revolutionary days. Recently it was restored as nearly as possible to its condition in 1776. Little change was needed in the room in which the founders of the Union affixed their signatures to the Declaration of Independence and drew up the constitution of 1787, where Franklin harmonized the quarrel between the advocates of centralization and state rights and where John Adams presided over the first United States senate. The floor was relaid and the ornamentation restored.

The Odd Fellows of Minnesota have completed, in connection with their home at Northfield, a magnificent hospital. The structure is two stories in height, of solid brick and plastered on metal lath. Every modern sanitary appliance has been provided, and the operating room is thoroughly up to date. There will be room for some thirty patients.

In Virginia there have been thirty-eight new subordinate lodges instituted during the year and twelve Rebekah lodges, the largest increase ever before known to the order in Virginia in one year.

The grand lodge of Minnesota refused to reduce the minimum fee from $20 to $12.

The Odd Fellows of Arkansas are taxed 70 cents per head for the maintenance of their home at Batesville, where thirty children and two widows are being cared for.

Vermont's largest lodge is Wantastiquet of Brattleboro. It has close to 500 members.

The order in Rhode Island now has fifty subordinate lodges, with a membership of over 6,000.

The grand lodge of Pennsylvania recently voted to appropriate $10,000 to help defray the expenses of entertaining the sovereign lodge in Philadelphia in September.

HAPPY PICNICKING.

Salad Sandwiches Lighten the Carrying and Serving of Food.

Pastebord or tin boxes carefully saved throughout the year, plenty of paraffin paper and wooden or paper plates for serving will reduce the labor of the picnic to a minimum. If the luncheon is so packed that each member of the party has something to carry, so much the better; a basketful of silver mounted conveniences will have to be tugged back, while the plebeian boxes can be disposed of and the tired but happy picnickers come home empty handed. The breakables in the eating line should be as conscientiously avoided as should dishes of any destructible material. Cake does not travel well, and any other delicate food is open to the same objection. Salad has carried well in a tin box, lined first with paraffin paper and then with a thick layer of lettuce leaves and the salad mixture covered with lettuce. However, salad sandwiches are delicious, and carrying salad means forks as well, while sandwiches are the food par excellence for picnics. The following are good ones culled from an English periodical:

Fairy Sandwiches.—Cut an equal number of thin slices of brown and white bread and butter them with the following mixture: Beat three ounces of fresh butter to a cream with four ounces of powdered sugar, beating it well together for some little time; then beat in a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Set it on ice for an hour. After having spread this mixture on the bread sprinkle thinly with blanched and chopped nuts of any kind. Press the white slices to the brown and stamp out in circles or triangles as you please.

Olive Sandwiches.—Stone and mince olives, season them with white pepper; then pound them to a smooth paste. Cut some thin slices of bread and butter and spread half with the pounded olives and the other half rather thickly with finely chopped tongue. Press the two halves together lightly.

Egg Sandwiches.—Take six hard boiled eggs, wash and bone and anchovies, a teaspoonful of mustard and a tablespoonful each of oil and cream. Pound this all to a smooth paste, seasoning it with salt and cayenne to taste. Spread this mixture thickly on thin slices of buttered bread.—Good Housekeeping.

alism, however, does not prevail in North Carolina, which has declared its faith in the matter by appointing May 20 a legal holiday. That firm stand, of course, should settle the business, but, alas for the frailty of man, there are still doubters.

The copy of the resolutions made by the secretary of the Charlotte meeting are reputed to have been destroyed by fire. On April 30, 1819, what purported to be a copy of the original document, made probably from recollection, was published in the Raleigh Register. Some of the phraseology of the composition was so reminiscent of the language of the Fourth of July declaration that the authenticity of the Mecklenburg resolutions became a matter of serious doubt. At the present time the weight of historical opinion seems to be against the validity of the resolutions as printed in the Raleigh Register and accepted by the legislature of North Carolina. In the face of this hesitation on the part of the historians the liberty loving citizens of the Old North State have borne substantial witness to their faith in the existing declaration and its framers by erecting in front of their beautiful new courthouse at Charlotte a noble memorial shaft to the memory of the fearless militiamen who, according to the belief of their descendants, assembled there on that eighteenth century May morning and declared:

First.—Whoever aids or abets the invasion of American rights is an enemy to the country and to the inalienable and inherent rights of man.

Second.—That all political ties between the citizens of Mecklenburg county and the British crown are dissolved.

Third.—That we do hereby declare ourselves a free and independent people under the control of no other power than that of our God and the general government of the congress, to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual co-operation, our lives, our fortunes and our most sacred honor.

Fourth.—That we acknowledge the existence of no law or public officer, but redopt the former laws in so far as they do not recognize the authority was the first to authorize her delegates in congress to vote for independence. When the Revolution broke out North Carolina went into the struggle with all her might. Her troops were in all the important battles of the early campaigns, and in 1780-81 the state was invaded by the British.

The Old North State was decidedly averse to leaving the Union at the outbreak of the civil war and opposed secession as a matter of expediency. When her position seemed no longer to be tenable, she reconsidered and passed the separating ordinance. Once committed, she threw herself into the cause with all the energy she could command. She furnished over 120,000 soldiers to the Confederacy, more than twice her proportion. She also lost more men than any other southern state, and during the last year of the war practically fed General Lee's army.

There ought not to be a patriotic soul in all America so ungenerous and so unkind of the past as to refuse to join with this dignified old commonwealth in the veneration which she maintains for those intrepid militiamen who went boldly into Charlotte—no matter when, less matter how—and declared themselves absolved forever from further allegiance to the foreign oppressor. Peace be to their spirits!

The Stars and Stripes.

The stars and stripes, the flag of liberty, floated over most of the fields of the Revolution, though it was only thirteen stars then against forty-five today. Several flags, among them a red field emblazoned with a pine tree or a rattlesnake, were used at first, and one with thirteen stripes was raised at the siege of Boston in 1775. On June 13, 1777, congress adopted our present national flag, and it is more than probable that the family arms of George Washington, which united stars and stripes in a very suggestive way, had something to do with the first choice. At first a stripe as well as a star was added for the birth of each new state. But this was soon found to be impracticable, and so the increase was confined to the constellation, while the stripes returned to the original thirteen, answering to the Revolutionary colonies.

The Symbol of July the Fourth

By LOUIS J. STELLMANN

ONCE, ere a people shook their shoulders free
Of an effete, debt-ridden monarchy,
And, after strife and famine, stood alone
In youthful might to call the land their own—
The Day of Independence was unknown.

JULY the fourth! What did it signify In Time's diurnal pageant, passing by The Great Recorder like an endless clan
Of dull-garbed pilgrims, treading on to span Forgotten spaces, since the count began?

BUT, lo, a nation rose and crowned the day
As sovereign of all the long array!
They spelled it "Freedom," and inscribed the name
On History's monolith in living flame.
Through all the years it has remained the same.

MORE than a century this day has stood
For greater liberty and greater good.
And, beacon-like, its message flashes forth.
Men in the east and west and south and north
Have read the meaning of July the Fourth.

THE tyrant trembles on his armored throne.
To him it signifies "Thou shalt atone."
While to the toilers whom his laws oppress
It proves that courage is its own success,
And gives them hope of life and happiness.

SYMBOL of Justice and Equality!
It rounds a tocsin over land and sea
To right the errors of a bygone age,
Inscribe the Future on a fairer page
And give each man his rightful heritage.

Independence hall, for the name of the chamber in which the Declaration was signed is now applied to the whole structure, was begun in 1732, the year in which George Washington was born, as a statehouse for the colony of Pennsylvania. John Kearsley was its architect, E. Wooley its builder. As originally constructed it was without the southern projection which forms the base of the present tower. When it was nearing completion the east room, later known as Independence hall, was used by the colonial assembly at its session in October, 1735, over which Andrew Hamilton presided. The west room was first used by the supreme court in 1743. In 1733 it was ordered that two additional buildings for the reception of the records and papers of the province be erected, forming wings on each side of the main structure. In 1750 the assembly authorized an addition on the south side of the main building for a staircase and for a suitable place in which to hang a bell. A wooden tower was added, and in this the Liberty bell was placed.

This bell, forever to be famous, was cast in England especially for the statehouse by Thomas Lester of Whitechapel, London. It was twelve feet in circumference around the lip and seven feet six inches around the crown, weighing approximately a ton. It was brought to this country in 1752. In being taken from the ship it met with a mishap and was recast in Philadelphia by Pass & Stow, with these words inscribed upon it: "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." On Aug. 27, 1753, it first called the assembly of Pennsylvania together. On Oct. 5, 1755, it tolled the arrival of the Royal Charlotte bearing tax stamps for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. The assembly, thus summoned, met and demanded that the stamps be returned to England. On Nov. 1, 1755, it was again tolled when the stamp tax was put in operation.

On July 30, 1768, it called a meeting at which it was said that "the parliament of Great Britain has reduced the people to the level of slaves." On June 1, 1774, it tolled the closing of the port of Boston. April 24, 1775, after the battle of Lexington, the bell summoned 8,000 citizens to the statehouse square, who pledged themselves to the cause of liberty. July 4, 1776, it announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Andrew McNair was the man who rang it on that memorable day. On Sept. 23 of the same year the bell called the assembly of Pennsylvania to meet for the last time. #### Expensive Celebrating.

In some of the elaborate displays at the resorts near New York and other large cities paper, powder and chemicals are turned into sparks, flame and smoke at the rate of $5,000 an hour, more than the highest priced opera singer in the world receives for her services. The rocket which whizzes into the air and breaks into a stream of pendants or is turned into a single star amid the "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" of the spectators is still used, but it has been wonderfully changed in recent years. It still whizzes upward, leaving a trail of sparks behind, but at the end of its journey may burst into a golden shower resembling some familiar flower. Perhaps from the center falls a rain of red, white and blue balls, floating gracefully downward until they almost touch the earth. Others form a cluster of long delicate lines somewhat similar to a raincoat on a summer day, and thus they are named. The rain comes downward, however, at a rate of from $15 to $20 a fall—much more costly than the natural shower. Assorted fireworks for a family celebration may be secured for from $2 to $5 and a car load of set pieces often costs at least $10,000.

IN SILK ATTIRE.

Invisible Striped Taffeta—Brown and White Stripes Very Chic.

The elegant gown here shown is in the new invisible striped taffeta, the bodice forming a gathered bolero.

edged with black velvet and gathered lace frills, with quaint cravat, tied at the top with black velvet butterfly bow. The deep belt is made of bands of black velvet. The skirt is edged with velvet bands, edged with lace, and the whole is a Paris creation.

Certain materials never really entirely disappear from fashion, or, rather, they return to favor, for a time at least, at short intervals, and this perhaps accounts for a present leaning toward moire or watered silk. In a faint widespread watering this old favorite is charming, especially in such quaint tints as blue, willow or melon green or a pink, like withered rose petals. The little silk coat can be very well expressed in moire, though in black it is not for the youthful.

A brown and white striped soft silk made with a bolero corsage and very full skirt is a French confection worn at a recent smart function. This striped silk resembles a soft silk of years gone by and is just now being devoted to very fine toilets, especially for races.

Taffeta, which began to be the rage a few years ago as a strictly glaze silk, has undergone a softening process that gives it a much more agreeable character.

Dainty Dollies.

A pretty set of dollies for carafe and water glasses may be made as follows: Cut from sheer white linen six squares 4 by 4 inches. Set about the edge of each a border of boniton lace braid having a scalloped and puffed edge. The dolly for the carafe may be made in the same way, only larger, say 9 by 9 inches. A monogram or initial in a corner of each in cream colored Asiatic filo silk floss would be a charming addition.

The meeting of the supreme council next year will be held at Old Point Comfort.

The supreme council will spend $18,000 this year to extend the order in states where no grand councils exist.

At the recent supreme council meeting a measure was passed under which members convicted of felony in any state court shall be expelled from the order.

MASONIC.

Delinquent Members a Drawback From Various Quarries.

We are much gratified to know that the Masonic bodies are looking more closely to their financial affairs than many of them have done heretofore and are requiring members to pay their dues as provided by their by-laws. There has been generally too much laxity in this regard, and many lodges have been in a weak, sickly condition in consequence of it, and a number of charters have been arrested from time to time for nonpayment of grand lodge dues. Delinquent members are a great drawback to a lodge, and when a large portion of the membership is permitted to get in that condition and remain so a lodge cannot hope to prosper. If a lodge will not collect its dues the best place for its charter is in the archives of the grand lodge—Masonic Advocate.

Plans have been prepared for a $250,000 Masonic temple in Washington.

The report presented at the recent session of the grand lodge of Maine showed 25,367 members, a gain of 686; initiations, 1,282; deaths, 451.

In the southern jurisdiction of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite there are thirty-six lodges of Perfection, fourteenth degree, with a membership of 17,397.

In the northern Scottish Rite jurisdiction there are eighty-one lodges of Perfection, fourteenth degree, with 37,087 members.

Among the fifty-one candidates who received the thirty-second degree at the Scottish Rite reunion in Guthrie, Okla., was General W. E. Harby, a full blooded Kaw Indian, secretary of the Kaw national council. He is ninety-one years of age and probably the oldest man who ever took the thirty-second degree.

The trustees of the widows and orphans' home at Fort Worth, Tex., will erect a boys' dormitory as an addition to the building, at a cost of $12,500, and an auditorium, costing $5,000.

A $30,000 Masonic temple is to be erected in Minneapolis, Minn.

There are at present twenty-two commanderies of Knights Templars in Maine, with a membership of 4,525.

The fraternity in Indiana lost by death five thirty-third degree Masons within sixty days.

The new grand jurisdiction of New Hampshire, which was formerly a part of the Massachusetts jurisdiction, is thriving very nicely. It has a good many loyal members from Massachusetts in its fraternal folds. John C. Bickford, past supreme master workman, is the grand recorder.

The financiers should not overlook the suspended members of their lodges while searching for new applications.

The grand lodge of Oregon recently voted to adopt the new rates of the supreme lodge.

Pennsylvania has to the credit of her members over $125,000 in the reserve fund.

Several large classes of candidates have been initiated in Kansas recently. The grand medical examiner is passing upon an average of twenty examinations per day in the jurisdiction.

Foresters of America.

There are 350 courts in New York state, with a membership in good standing of 45,340.

May reports show the Foresters of America is making good progress all along the line.

A home for aged and indigent members of the order will be erected in Pennsylvania.

Golden Eagle Knights.

From present indications it is thought that a grand castle will be established in Illinois before the next session of the supreme body.

The Cadillac hotel has been selected as headquarters at the next session of the supreme castle, which meets in Detroit, Mich., next October.

Knights and Ladies of Honor.

The order on April 1 had a membership in good standing of 80,950.

There has been a net gain in membership of 1,177 in Missouri during the past year.

Texes Knights and Ladies of Honor had a membership of 5,200 on May 1.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

Obituary.

Rachel Brown Williams, daughter of David M. and Mary Brown, was born Feb. 16, 1865, near Medora. She was an obedient, lovely child and by perseverance and energy she obtained a good education, and gave bright promises of future usefulness. She joined the Christian church under the preaching of Elder J. J. Lockhart and her whole life spoke for Christ. In Feb. 1888 she was united in marriage to Leroy Williams, of Knox County, Ind. and never was union happier. One child, a bright promising son, now sixteen years of age, blessed this union. On this son she lavished a wealth of love, teaching him to prepare during his earthly life for the heavenly life. For seventeen years she walked proudly by the side of her husband. Loyalty and devotion to husband and son were her highest ambitions. Care for aged parents her most pressing duty. Fifteen years ago she with husband and son removed to Wyoming near Cheyenne, where her husband had a position as agent for the Union Pacific Railroad. Some years ago her health began to fail. Her everthoughtful husband did everything to have her restored to health. She longed to live for her loved ones. She was brave, and endured much for the sake of getting well. May 25, 1905 she died at St. John's Hospital, where she had undergone an operation for appendicitis. Her last words was "I am fully prepared and have nothing to regret." Her life was a benediction to those around her. Her funeral preached at the First Baptist church, by Rev. C. E. Tingley, Sunday May 28, Cheyenne Wyoming. Interment at Lakeview Cemetery. Besides husband and son, Mrs. Williams leaves an aged mother and five sisters to mourn the loss of a beloved daughter and sister. Her father Elder David M. Brown, who preached the gospel of Christ for fifty years preceded her to the heavenly land.

SEEING AMERICA.

Wonderful Scenic Trip Across Rocky Mountains to Oregon Exposition.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23rd and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the Oregon Exposition, in addition to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the scenic wilderness of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what Americans have not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when these great sights should be seen in reality. The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensive than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the west. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of conventions, through time and passenger service apply to ticket agent of Pennsylvania Lines.

Under the Trees at Winona Assembly Grounds, Winona Lake, Ind.
The Year Book of the Winona Assembly and School for 1905 is out. It is a beautifully illustrated booklet of ninety-six pages, copies of which may be had upon application to the general offices of the Assembly at Winona Lake, Indiana.

The Summer Assembly, which opens on July 3rd and continues for seven weeks, presents an unusual array of distinguished names. Among those who will appear on the Winona platform this summer, we note the names of Prof.
Leon Vincent, Dr. W. A. College of the Armour Institute, Prof. Blanchard of the University of Chicago, Frederick Warde, Bertha Kunz Baker, Dr. S. C.
Schmucker, President McCormick of the University of Western Pennsylvania, Mark Guy Pearce, and G. A. Johnston Ross of London, Dr. R. S. MacArthur, Bishop Samuel Fallows, Dr. Robert W. Rogers, Ople Read, Charles Eugene
Blanks, Leland Powers, Bertha Kunz Baker, Fred Emerson Brooks, S. Parkes Cadman, Jack Crawford, S. A. Lour, D. W. Robertson, and Nat M. Brigham; while among the musical features arranged for are the Morin French Military Band of New York (60 pieces), with Mme. Shotwell Piper and Francis Archom-vauit as soloists, Rogers Concert Band, the Gamble Concert Company, the Rheinberger Quartet, and Roney's Boys.

The Bible Conference, under the direction of Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, has become the most popular institution of this character in the country. Among the distinguished preachers and laymen who will be heard at this Conference are Dr. Francis L. Patton, ex-president of Princeton University; Dr. G. A.
Johnston Ross of Cambridge, Eng., Bishop J. M. Thoburn, Rev. Henry Ostrum, Dr. L. W. Munhall, Rev. James M. Gray of Boston, Maud Ballington Booth,
W. E. Lougee, business secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association;
Hon. M. Linn Bruce, Lieutenant governor of New York; John Willis Baer of New York, John H. Converse of Philadelphia, and Hon. William Jennings Bryan.

The Summer Schools will open on July 3d and continue six weeks. Prof.
Stanley Coulter of Purdue University is dean. Work in twenty departments is offered. During the same period a Bible School will be conducted by Dr. W.
W. White of New York City, probably the greatest Bible teacher in the country. A school of Sunday School Methods under the direction of Dr. H. M.
Hamill of Nashville, Tenn., will continue for two weeks. Fuller information with reference to these and other plans for the summer season at Winona Lake is given in the Year Book.

Mount Memorial Building, Winona Lake, Ind.

An agricultural school, where the practice as well as the theory of farming is taught, is not so common an institution as might generally be supposed.
The agricultural colleges teach the theory of farming with enough of the practice to illustrate it—and a very useful sort of college it is. But the Winona Agricultural Institute, located at Winona Lake, Indiana, reverses the process, and teaches the practice of farming, with enough of the theory to make it effective. The boy who enters this school, which is an institution founded by the Winona Assembly Association two years ago and is housed in a beautiful new school building very appropriately called Mount Memorial Hall after Indiana's late farmer governor, James A. Mount—gets besides a good academic education, the "real thing" in the farming line, if he wants it. The institution operates a model dairy, puts out crops, cultivates and harvests them, teaches the composition of soils and the methods of improving them, and sends the boy back to the farm from whence he came talking the farmer's language about farm work, and not a scientific terminology which the "old man" finds it hard to understand. Visitors to the Winona Assembly this year will see a party of these boys engaged in cultivating a hundred acres of cucumbers, the output having already been contracted for. As the Assembly owns and controls nearly two thousand acres of land surrounding Winona Lake, there is plenty of soil at hand for experimental purposes.

Prof. H. E. Dubois of Winona Lake, Indiana, the principal of the school, who is just now sending out the catalogue for next year to all applicants, says that the present student enrollment of 150 and the large number of inquiries received with reference to the work of the institution, indicates that the institution fills a need for a common sense school for ambitious boys who are anxious to fit themselves for careers of usefulness.
